We need the surroundings which we can conduct sciences-based safety measurements and continue to do same manner in order to ensure the safety of drugs and put patients and the nation ease. It is important that we conduct actively clinical trials and so on to evaluate the efficacy and safety of drugs, and supply those results to medical scene quickly. Japanese government draws up some plans to activate clinical trials, and intends to improve national health and promote ability of research and development of drugs. Since activation of clinical trials is important for progression of medicine too, drug companies are also expected to take part positively.
