Various career opportunities are given to personnel who graduated Pharmacy school. I chose a hospital pharmacist as my first job in the cause of practicing interviews to sham patient at the university. However, my first job was changed from the hospital to the cosmetic firm as the interest in the dermatology field had been increased while I had encountered many patients with atopic dermatitis who worried about disease. I am in charge of support to the product development div., the training div. and the customer div. etc. including correspondence to the questions from physicians who were asked questions by patients now.

I keenly recognize the importance of "Human power", "Will", "Specialty", and "Communications" by interacting with different major field though there are many learning after people go into the workforce. These words are topics on the educational column of newspapers however there are some questions. 1) Learn at the university? 2) Universal ability or specific ability in each occupation? 3) Difference in "Communications"?

I would like to present some examples of the division which focus on other fields.
